Campus crime records go public

By Bob Chiarito
Police Reporter

Although SIUC has reported campus crimes to the FBI and the state since the early 1970s, other universities now are making their crime records available to the public because of a recent crime awareness act.

In the past, it was not uncommon for large universities such as SIUC to try to keep crime statistics underground, but because of the Student Right To Know Act of 1990, crime rates now are public knowledge.

In comparison to other Illinois colleges, SIUC's crime rate is about average, although almost all SIUC crimes are reported to campus police, which goes directly into campus crime reports.

At schools with a small police force, like Loyola University in Chicago, people can report crime to city police departments and be spared from a campus crime report.

In 1992, SIUC had nine reported cases of public indecency, seven criminal sexual abuse cases, six robberies, 13 aggravated assaults, 75 burglaries, 14 motor vehicle thefts, 63 liquor law violations, 11 drug abuse violations, and six cases of illegal weapon possessions.

SIUC Police Chief Sam Jordan said crime is nothing new to SIUC.

"Campus communities are not immune to crime — I think it is a reflection of society," Jordan said.

SIUC administration of justice professor James Garofalo said the low amount of crime reported at Loyola, an urban university, is because the city has a small force and the Chicago Police Department handles most of Loyola's crime.

"Although the students at urban colleges may be at more risk of victimization, the crimes which happen to them may be reported to city, rather than university police," Garofalo said. "You must also take into account the number of students enrolled in the universities and the number that live on campus."

SIUC and Western Illinois University reported the most rapes in 1992, with nine on each campus.

However, according to the 1991 National Crime Victimization Survey, only 59 percent of all rapes are reported, Garofalo said.

Carbondale Police Lieutenant Steve Odum said it is difficult to speculate how many rapes actually go unreported.

"We as police officers have no way of knowing how many rapes go unreported. Quite a few are committed by people known to the victim," Odum said.

State hedging on early retirement plan

By Jamie Madigan
Politics Reporter

The state legislature is reluctant to pass an early retirement pension plan for University employees until after fall elections because the bill is controversial, State Rep. Gerald Hawkins said Tuesday.

Hawkins, D-Du Quoin, told a group of University employees that pension bills are debatable and lawmakers prefer to wait until after they are elected to another term to pass the legislation.

"It is highly unlikely that a pension bill will pass this spring," he said. "The general consensus in Springfield now is that it's not going to happen, and that it will be this fall — after the general elections."

William Jackson, a retirement specialist for the State University Retirement System, explained the bill, the 10/30 Early Retirement Proposal. "The 10 and 30 is really two segments," he said. "The 10 represents an increase in the annuity (employee's benefits)."

Under the bill, an employee's benefits will be increased by 10 percent of

International students failing to embrace social side of SIU

By Emily Priddy
International Reporter

Although international students should concentrate on studies, many miss out on educational opportunities outside the classroom when they fail to take advantage of social activities at SIUC, international program workers say.

Representatives from SIUC's International Programs and Services met with international students Tuesday at the Student Center to discuss strategies for success in and out of the classroom.

Mythili Rumbland, a graduate assistant in foreign student advisement, said many international students are trying to confirm visas and register for classes during fall orientation sessions, so the organization offers activities such as Tuesday's meeting to help them adapt to campus life throughout the year.

Rumbland said international students can learn more about U.S. culture by making friends outside the classroom.

Rumbland recommended international students become involved with study groups to meet U.S. citizens and enhance their understanding of concepts learned in the classroom.

"You wouldn't believe how many friends you can make (in

Officials agree with court guidelines

By Kyle J. Chapman
Special Assignment Reporter

Some African-American SIUC students and faculty members agree with the Department of Education's new guidelines for efficient integration that excludes historically black colleges and universities from compliance.

Attending a historically black college or university offers students an opportunity to explore the black experience from a predominantly black setting, assistant professor of history Julius Thompson said.

Thompson, who graduated from a historically black university before getting a master's and doctoral degrees from Princeton University, said he disagrees with the idea of desegregation of black colleges.

"An education at a historically black college or university can have a great psychological value for the black student in America," he said. "The personal attention that many black students receive at black institutions can be a lifeline for the average or even the superior students."

The guidelines of integration are a part of a Supreme Court decision

MEETING TO DEFUSE VIOLENCE POSTPONED — JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—South Africa's pre-election tensions mounted Tuesday as a meeting of its black and white leaders to defuse political violence was postponed and the anti-election leader of the Zulu-based Inkatha party predicted war if next month's historic vote is not also delayed. The Zulu king, Goodwill Zwelithini, requested the postponement of the meeting, which had been hastily arranged following gun battles Monday that left at least 53 people dead and hundreds wounded. The violence erupted when armed Zulus protesting plans for the April 26-28 ballot gathered for a rally in Johannesburg's central business district and encountered what appeared to be sniper fire at two sites.

CANADA OPENS DOOR TO TRADE WITH ASIA — OTTAWA—When protesting Chinese students were gunned down in Beijing's Tiananmen Square five years ago, Canada quickly joined the United States in condemnation, chilling its long-standing trade and diplomatic relations with China. But now the new Canadian government, parting company with Washington, is closing the door on that experiment in recrimination and opening a new door leading to the world's biggest market. Canadian leaders are putting out the word that Canada's trading opportunities in Asia are a key element of its economic recovery—and thus of its foreign policy. Human rights violations, while still officially a Canadian concern, are unofficially bygone.

SECURITY GUARD BELIEVED LINKED TO KILLING — TIJUANA, Mexico—Amid increasing indications of a conspiracy, Mexican federal police now believe that a security guard aided the gunman accused of assassinating presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio last week, authorities said Monday. Investigators were questioning Tranquilino Sanchez Venegas, a retired former police officer hired to provide crowd control, whom photos and videos of the incident show near Colosio and accused gunman Mario Aburto Martinez seconds before the fatal shots were fired.

SLAYING SEEN AS CATALYST FOR PRI REFORMS — MEXICO CITY—The last time a virtual president was assassinated in Mexico, the course of the country's political history was changed forever. The year was 1928. A religious fanatic shot and killed President-elect Alvaro Obregon. To guarantee the ruling elite's hold on power in the wake of Obregon's murder, strongman Plutarco Elias Calles the next year decreed into existence the vast, all-consuming political party that has governed Mexico ever since. Last week's assassination of Luis Donaldo Colosio, who as presidential candidate for the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party was the heir apparent to President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, has once again plunged Mexico into the kind of crisis that could spell political progress—or political disaster.

PROPOSED COST TO RESTORE BASIC UTILITIES — SARAJEVO, Bosnia—The United States and Britain, in an assessment of initial rehabilitation costs for this war-ravaged city, have drawn up a list of projects that estimates a cost of $275 million just to restore basic utilities. The U.S.-British report, the first of its kind, is likely to touch off a lively controversy among international donors, and between them and the Muslim-led Bosnian government, about priorities for the city's rehabilitation and how it should be undertaken.

BEATING LEFT PHYSICAL, EMOTIONAL SCARS — LOS ANGELES—Rodney G. King told a federal court jury in his lawsuit against the City of Los Angeles that he was stripped of his decency and still has physical and emotional scars from his beating at the hands of Los Angeles police officers three years ago. King, wearing an open-collared, white shirt and gray slacks, answered a battery of questions from his lead attorney Milton Grimes, recalling the night of the beating and his feelings at the time. At one point, he re-enacted the incident, stepping down from the witness stand and lying on the floor to demonstrate his vulnerability on the night of March 3, 1991.

SIUC graduate makes it big

By Angela Hyland
Minorities Reporter

SIUC graduate Richard Norwood has attained a position administrators say they would like to see all students reach one day.

Norwood, a 1967 graduate, currently works as executive vice president for West Coast Corporate Services, Inc., a sales and marketing consulting firm.

Norwood will speak today through Friday in SIUC classes about his career and how students might learn from it. Norwood also will speak to administrators about what they might include in programs to help students better prepare for business careers.

Although Norwood often puts in 10-12 hour days, he said he does not consider long hours a sacrifice.

"Anything you feel strongly about and have a passion for isn't a sacrifice," Norwood said.

Norwood has more than 25 years of corporate and executive experience, but said he always has known he wanted to go into business.

He said the focus he has maintained throughout his academic and professional career led him to his current position.

"If there is something you want badly enough, there are sacrifices you must make (to achieve your goals)," he said.

Sacrifice may come in the form of spending less time with family or friends or not having the opportunity to participate in sporting events, he said.

"That's the price you pay to do what you want to do," he said.

Richard Norwood, executive vice president of West Coast Corporate Services, lectures in Rehn Hall.

Norwood said it sometimes was difficult to maintain a focus during college because he seldom saw immediate pay-offs for his hard work. He said he has since learned the value of planning for the future.

"Success is not measured in days or weeks," he said. "The time frame is longer than that. You may have to postpone some of the immediate gratifications to reach long-term goals."

Norwood said he would like to be able to be judged solely on the work he performs, but this does not always occur.

"Is there discrimination in the work force? Absolutely," Norwood said.

It exists in every field, and may be directed against someone because of a manager's prejudice against a person's skin color, gender or even hair style, Norwood said. Never should anyone allow other people's biases to interfere with personal goals, he said.

"There's no excuse not to excel," he said. "You owe it to yourself."

Norwood is the second guest lecturer the College of Business and Administration has invited to speak to students this semester.

Minority Programs Director Michael Haywood said he believes Norwood will be just as well-received as the last executive speaker.

After the previous lecturer's presentation ended, Haywood said a group of about 10 students followed the speaker to his next scheduled appearance in order to continue the conversation.

Cigarette smokers fund health reform with tax

By Aleksandra Marcy
Health Reporter

A $1.25-a-pack increase in cigarette tax to finance health reform and a comprehensive ban on public smoking are the latest federal government proposals designed to affect smokers and non-smokers in both positive and negative ways.

Kevin Lister, spokesman for the American Cancer Society, said one of every three smokers will die from their smoking habit. One out of every four adults in the United States is a smoker and about 420,000 deaths a year are attributed to smoking.

The federal government introduced the public-smoking ban to discourage smoking and protect non-smokers from drifting smoke. Cigarettes and other tobacco products would be prohibited in every office building, factory, indoor restaurant and bar and in hotel rooms when a hotel employee is present, according to the proposal.

The proposal says all employers who choose to allow smoking must designate a separate area with its own ventilation system. Confronted by that cost, most employers are expected to ban workplace smoking.

U.S. Labor Secretary Robert Reich, whose department has the authority to regulate workplace smoking, said the ban would apply to six million indoor workplaces in the United States.

The proposal still may be revised after hearings and is not expected to take effect until late in 1995.

Lister said the ban is a "terrific idea" because it would help reduce the number of people who die from second-hand smoke.

"Each year in the workplace, 50,000 people die from second-hand smoke. We ban less harmful products and its about time smoking is banned as well," Lister said.

Gwen Hunt, owner of PK's, 308 South Illinois Ave., said she would create a separate area for smokers if she had to, but would prefer not to make such arrangements. She said it is an infringement on her rights as a business owner.

"I don't smoke and I never have, but it seems ridiculous to ban smoking in a bar," she said.

Ron Yearian, a patron of PK's, said he would prefer a non-smoking bar.

"If there was a non-smoking bar in Carbondale, I'd be there," he said.

A Prairie Farms Carbondale Milk Plant employee said workers only are allowed to smoke in certain areas of the plant during breaks.

SIUC banned smoking in all indoors areas on campus in summer 1993. However, the Illinois Clean Indoor Air Act went into effect in summer 1991.

Also affecting smokers is a House subcommittee which approved a tax hike to finance health reform to include subsidies to help small businesses insure employees.

But Hunt said the plan will not work to help small-business owners.

President Clinton originally proposed a 75-cent increase in the 24-cent federal tax on tobacco products to raise $10 billion a year. Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Texas, won a 6-5 vote to make the cigarette tax $1.49 a pack, raising an extra $6

Rainforest threats to be discussed in program

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

Projects such as helping the native people of the Amazon Rainforest acquire power over their land to continuing living as they have is one of a variety of issues to be discussed by a member of a rainforest conservation program.

Jim Penn, of the Amazon Conservation Fund, will speak about these and other issues facing peoples of the rainforest in two presentations Thursday.

"Working with Indigenous Peoples and Non-Governmental Organizations" will be at 12 p.m. at the University Museum Auditorium. "Conservation Strategy on the Reserva Comunal Tsimshiyaca-Tahuayo" will be at 8 p.m. at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave. Both lectures are open to the public.

Ed Schott, a member of the SIUC Student Environmental

Wilderness devastated by overharvesting, clearcutting

Center, said the center, along with several other organizations, are sponsoring the presentations to help educate the SIUC community on issues of the rainforest.

The Amazon Rainforest is located in the lower basins of the northern portion of South America and is in danger of the exploitation of its ecosystem, Schott said.

Threats to the forest include oil development, mining exploration, logging and slash-and-burn agriculture.

Slash-and-burn agriculture involves clearing a portion of the forest, burning trees to release nutrients and letting cattle graze on the upcoming vegetation.

The problem with this type of agriculture is that the soil is so poor it only can support the vegetation for a few years. After cattle can no longer feed on the area, the process is repeated in a different portion of the rainforest, Schott said.

"On a small scale, slash-and-burn agriculture would not be so damaging," he said.

"But it continues to be done and the areas are so large the forest cannot envelope the area (to revegetate)."

Oil development often is hazardous to plants and animals in the rainforest.

Large corporations will dig holes to store oil temporarily, but when rains come water sinks to the bottom of the holes, spilling the oil through the forest and sometimes killing plant and animal life, he said.

"Overharvesting of fruits and trees and massive clearing of trees is destroying the ecosystem of the rainforests," Schott said.

The fund helps natives interested in family planning with birth control and other issues, Schott said. The fund also has helped the people create agroforestry projects to produce marketable fruits for the natives' livelihood.

"These people need help protecting reserves which are created for them to live in," Schott said.

"Once a reserve is created the people need help to keep the land, to make sure what is done is done at a sustainable level. A reserve is just a piece of the large forest, so it needs to be policed to protect the area from extraction (clearing of vegetation)."

Schott said the problem with creating a reserve in the rainforest is similar to creating a wilderness area in the United States.

"A wilderness area will not remain a wilderness area unless there are people in the area to enforce — it's the same with the rainforest," he said.

Schott currently is working on establishing the Rainforest

Alliance Group as a registered student organization.

"This is such a big issue that it is a lot for a committee in SEC. It needs to be an organization of its own," Schott said.

The center has helped the group in its efforts to become an Registered Student Organization.

The center bought a slide show in the rainforest for public outreach.

Schott said the group plans to visit local schools with the slide show and will work with indigenous groups along with the Amazon Conservation Fund.

An organizational and informational meeting for those interested will be at 7:30 p.m. April 6 in the Sangamon Room on the second floor of the Student Center.

The presentation is sponsored by the Rainforest Alliance Group, a committee of the Student Environmental Center, and co-sponsored by Mid-America Peace Project and Native Forest Network.

English lecturer tells tale of life through story

Characters drawn from own life story

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

The audience laughed, and Lex Williford paused. The good storyteller knows when to wait for his audience, and Williford, a lecturer in the English department, is a master.

Williford read his story, "Hoot's Last Bubblebath" Tuesday night at the Student Center Auditorium. Based loosely on Williford's uncle Tim, whom he said loves to give everyone a hard time, it is one of his sentimental favorites.

The story, told in a soft, rapid fire voice, is from Williford's book "Macalevel's Thumb." It is the story of Hoot, his wife Libby, Hoot's nephew Travis, and a nurse named Anna.

Hoot is a crotchety, give-'em-Hell character whose wife of fifty plus years is dying. She is 15 years older than he is, and he is 74.

When Travis gets a divorce, he comes to visit his aunt and uncle who he has not seen for some time. He comes to do his laundry, and ends up staying for months.

Throughout the course of the story, Williford manages to give the characters faces without ever giving more than one or two physical cues.

Using only one prop, a glass of water which doubles alternately for Jim Beam, apple juice, and Hawaiian Punch, he illustrates his down-but-not-out characters, and it is easy to picture them sitting at the breakfast table talking about heartbreak.

Williford's simple, straightforward language draws his listeners to the story, and by the end it forms a vise that won't let go.

Although the story is somewhat predictable, it is charming in its warmth. It is a story of love, eccentricity, and not being afraid, for Williford, it is a story of success.

Diplomacy answer to North Korea threat

RECENTLY, THE NORTH KOREAN GOVERNMENT has posed bold threats of launching an invasion into South Korea. The threats come amidst a rise in tensions between the United Nations and N. Korea over the country's refusal to allow U.N. inspectors into a plant suspected of producing weapons-grade plutonium. To protect S. Korea and 37,000 U.S. soldiers stationed there, President Clinton last week ordered an unspecified number of Patriot missile batteries to the country.

IN 1950 THE UNITED STATES BECAME INVOLVED in a war on the Korean Peninsula which officially lasted three years. Through the course of the war 54,000 U.S. soldiers lost their lives, as well as 400,000 South Koreans and 1.5 million North Koreans and Chinese.

The Korean War ended in 1953 in the form of a stalemate after President Dwight D. Eisenhower threatened to use nuclear weapons on China, N. Korea's close ally. The stalemate never resolved the tensions between the two countries, it only squelched them.

Forty-one years later the tensions are again heightening and China once more is the key to a peaceful resolution.

SINCE THE END OF THE KOREAN WAR, THE Republic of (S.) Korea has become a strong economic power in Asia with a Gross National Product of $171 billion for a population of 44,000,000. North Korea though, has remained a communist state since 1948 under the rule of President Kim Il-Sung and has a GNP of only $20 billion.

Currently, N. Korea's economy is in dire need of help. Under the leadership of President Sung, almost 25 percent of the country's GNP goes toward defense spending and many of the country's factories do not operate for lack of Russian oil and spare parts. The countries that once were trading partners now want currency and not barter goods. Even China, N. Korea's closest ally, began in the 1980s to better relations by indirectly trading with S. Korea.

Many believe the economic conditions of N. Korea are the cause of the country's refusal to allow the U.N. inspections. President Sung may be using the threat of building a nuclear weapon to gain trade concessions and international financing that would breath life into the economy.

CHINA IS THE KEY TO A PEACEFUL SOLUTION. The country now holds a permanent seat on the U.N. Security Council giving it the power to veto any proposed sanctions which it feels are aimed at punishing N. Korea. This means the United States must deal carefully with China and is a significant reason why President Clinton has given it most-favored nation trading status, worth about $10 billion a year to China.

Earlier this week, China urged the U.N. Security Council to issue a non-binding statement to be adopted by consensus that would urge N. Korea to cooperate with U.N. inspectors. If the council does so, and N. Korea continues to disallow inspections, China will not veto economic sanctions.

The answer to cooling tensions between North and South Korea is to strategically add diplomatic, not military, pressure.

Letters to the Editor

Few use firearms for criminal activity

I believe the Law Abiding Citizen, within the next few months, is in for a rude awakening.

One morning, your newspaper may receive a similar type of bulletin, for publication.

"Citizens, institutions, and organizations should hand in without delay all types of firearms, munitions, explosives, military hardware and equipment in their unlawful possession. The interior ministry, the KGB and defense ministry of the USSR should secure strict compliance with this demand, in case of refusal, to confiscate in a compulsory order and bring offenders to strict criminal and administrative account."

"To establish control over the mass media, entrusting it to an agency specially set up under the state committee for the state of emergency."

The above items are real! They were intercepted and copied, via radioteletype, from the Russian news agency TASS, when Gorbys was disposed in the coup of Aug. 19. I have enclosed copy of original release for editor.

In the conversations I have been having with hunters and sportsmen, I find that most of them don't believe that the "Assault Weapon" ban is going to affect them. They are wrong in their assumption!

What they do not realize is that once the ban begins, using the guise of "Assault Weapons," the government will continue to expand the list until it covers all firearms.

"So the apathetic American citizens will let their government take another freedom away."

— Mike Hamilton

So as to not enrage the sportsmen, the list will expand a small amount each year, rather than all at once. Once the firearm is on "the banned list," the government could take it without paying for it, and/or charge you with a federal crime (if you have not registered it). Maybe they'll give you a receipt, but little or no money.

Handgun Control Inc. (HCI) lobbyists, working with the state and federal governments, want to place extreme taxes on firearm's and related items, so as to tax them out of existence!

Reloading supplies, primers powder and loaded ammunition is on their agenda, as well as all firearms.

Basically, what they are saying is, "We don't care about the Second Amendment to the Bill of Rights." We are going to disarm the Law Abiding American Citizen, damn the Bill of Rights.

So the apathetic American citizens will let their government take another freedom away.

It is a minority group using firearms for criminal purposes. In spite of what the news media wants you to believe, the "Assault Weapons" that the government wants to ban is rarely used in a crime. It is all a sham.

"The supposed quierude of a good man allures the ruffian; on the other hand, arms like laws discourage and keep the invader and plunderer in awe, and preserve order in the world as well as the property. The same balance would be preserved were all the world destitute of arms, for all would be alike; but since some will not, others dare not lay them aside...horrid mischief would ensue were one half the world deprived of the use of them..." - Thomas Paine

Stereotypes fueled by generalizations

Thank you Mr. Caldwell, for pointing out that, GASP!, black Americans take pride in the same things many white Americans do. I'm sure no one on campus realized this until your Feb. 10 letter because we get every single one of our impressions about black America from the television.

Give me a break! I am sick to death of Rush Limbaugh rhetoric and American Heritage statistics.

You speak of "liberal democrats" controlling Congress for the last fifty years, obviously the people of this country want it that way or we wouldn't keep electing them would we? Perhaps you feel angry because your view is the MINORITY.

Besides, "liberal democrats" constitute only a small portion of the democrats who make up Congress. There is a distinction that I think you fail to recognize.

Broad generalizations do not benefit anyone. They are exactly what have promoted wrongful stereotypes about people and organizations.

One should not characterize the entire republican party because of the actions of Jesse Helms, nor should they call democrats racist! Think about that Mr. Caldwell!

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Human rights at the top of all rights

I'm sick and tired of being discriminated against. It's the fault of everyone else that I can't succeed.

"Help! Help! I'm being repressed!" -The Holy Grail. It's Racism! It's Sexism! It's intolerance towards my sexuality! It's discrimination towards my religion! It's bigotry! It's hatred!

I have rights, I have SPECIAL rights! I'm a minority and deserve MORE than everyone else. I should be treated with preferential consideration over you. White, German-Irish American, heterosexual, Christian, men unit!...Sound ridiculous?

Well so does all the rest. There are no racial rights, only human rights. No gay rights, no religious rights, no women rights. Just human rights. Nobody has anymore rights than anyone else.

"There are no racial rights, only human rights. No gay rights, no religious rights, no women rights."

—Gerald E. Yungling

Notice I didn't mention animal "rights," which is an all together different breed of idiocy. Evidently what the Founding Fathers really meant was "...created equal, except for those who are 'different', they're MORE EQUAL than the rest."

The real sexist are groups like NOW.

The real racist are the Louis Farrakhan's and Affirmative Action. Groups like Queer Nation and Act Up are the real intolerant.

The exploitation of differences leads to hatred, ask Hitler. feminism isn't about equality but superiority. Multi-culturalism isn't about diversity, but U.S. bashing.

Political correctness isn't consideration of others, it's suppression of ideas. Wake up!

—Gerald E. Yungling, sophomore, biology

Alternative hobby suggested

For the last few years I've been reading your weekly, and sometimes daily letters to the editor. They have always been a mild form of amusement for me, but now I'm politely asking you to stop it. I've had enough: I can't sit back and allow you to embarrass yourself any longer.

Now before you get all bent out of shape and write yet another letter accusing me of being part of some kind of conservative-bashing-political-correctness-censorship conspiracy, just simmer down and consider my advice. Sometimes people—conservatives, liberals, militant Christians or ardent atheists—need to be told when they are becoming caricatures to their own ideologies.

Although the zeal and plain quantitative persistency of your published opinions is, I suppose, admirable, the redundancy and utter insipidity of their expression betrays their purposes.

I take it that you are someone who wants to be taken seriously. Well I must tell you Mr. Caldwell, I have yet to meet anyone who takes your letters seriously. Perhaps it's time to find a new hobby.

Constitution, gun laws still useful today

'Shock value' does not equate news, statistics compiled not indicative

In Ms. Carolyn Briggs letter of 03/09/1994 she states that she is an open minded person and then proceeds indulging in a diatribe against private ownership of certain firearms, using arguments which are obviously based on unresearched personal feelings not fact.

She stated "the main reason why someone puts a gun in their hand is doing so with intention of taking a life." If this were true our nation would have been depopulated some time ago.

Every day in our nation millions of law abiding citizens take up arms of the military and handgun variety to maintain proficiency, practice safe handling procedures, target shoot, "go plinking", defend themselves against criminal attack, and numerous other law abiding pursuits.

She also wondered "what does a truly law abiding citizen need with a gun anyway?"

What does a "Truly law abiding" citizen need with a Ferrari or a radar detector? In a free Republic it is not the job of government to determine what it's citizens "truly need" and what they "should" want.

As to self defense with a really mean dog.

Not a good idea. Firearms are completely predictable in how they behave and when no one is around and they are properly stored absolutely safe.

As to the Constitution not applying these days I would like to pose the question: What do you think would be the likelihood of you being able to purchase cancer insurance after your doctor has discovered you have malignant tumor?

The second amendment is just such an insurance policy against the cancer of a possibly abusive government at a later time.

Ms. Briggs' argument that Benevolent old King George used to attempt the seizure of the colonist's privately owned "assault rifles" which resulted in "the shot heard round the world" at Lexington and Concord Bridge.

Feelings and anecdotal episodes drawn from shock value oriented "news" are not facts.

Neither are statistics compiled specifically to support a foregone conclusion.

Saluki pride keeps on going

I am writing regarding Mr. Da Silva. I strongly believe that one of the events which took place in his life was that of a testing point in his life.

Sometimes in each and every one of our lives we all make mistakes, and we just don't realize that we are just human.

We all learn by making mistakes. If that weren't the case, there would be no such thing as schools and institutions of higher learning, not to mention, Southern Illinois University (as an example).

I believe that as individuals become more capacitated and advance more upwardly in the social structure of society, that not only is knowledge an important factor, but also another very important factor is being able to be compassionate and understanding of others weaknesses and faults.

Sometimes when we see someone who has fallen off of the social staircase, we tend to let negative prejudgmental attitudes and decisions towards the same.

Instead we must understand that it is our moral duty to reach out to those who have fallen and help them to stand up again.

Sometimes we go to our places of worship, but

Alumnus congratulates hoopsters

I would like to congratulate Coach Herrin and the SIU basketball team on a great year! This season was filled with some great games and a most memorable Missouri Valley Conference Tournament. Back to back NCAA Tournament appearances should make all SIU fans very proud. On behalf of myself and Saluki fans all across this country, Thank You Coach Herrin and all of your players. See you in November!

—Todd Martin, DDS, Alumnus

sometimes that belief in God is merely formal but doesn't come from the heart.

It is necessary to realize and understand that 'all have fallen short of the Grace of God.'

Just because one doesn't approve of certain types of unacceptable social behaviors does not mean that ostracism should be the means of resource and/or resolution.

My final comments to 'o brasileiro mal compreendido', are the following:

- 1) Don't give up the faith because there is good in everyone and everything, and
- 2) You must stand strong in the face of adversity and keep your eyes on your goal(s).

Five engineering students chosen to intern in Germany

By Doug Durso
General Assignment Reporter

Five SIUC engineering students will study at the Technical University in Clausthal, Germany this summer in an on-going research exchange program.

Program coordinator James H. Swisher said the SIUC engineering department will send the students as part of an exchange program started with Clausthal about three years ago.

"We've had students come from Clausthal and these are the first students going to Clausthal," Swisher said.

Swisher, an emeritus professor in mechanical engineering and energy processes, said he selected the students for a three-month research internship, most of whom will work on environmental engineering projects.

Projects will include research on water and air pollution, Swisher said.

This program is important because multi-cultural learning is a priority, he said. People will come into contact with other cultures more often in today's world.

People now compete for jobs in a global market instead of just in the United States, Swisher said.

The university in Clausthal offers excellent instruction, provides valuable experience and an opportunity to learn about other cultures while providing summer income, Swisher said.

Student selections were based on grade-point average and an interest in traveling, Swisher said.

Robert Kuhn, a student from Clausthal who came to SIUC in February, said the exchange is extremely valuable.

The program exchange is a way to gain new experiences, meet different people and do valuable research, Kuhn said.

Kuhn, a fifth-year student in process engineering, said he always wanted to see United States and the exchange presented the perfect opportunity.

Students who have a chance for an overseas internship should take advantage of the opportunity, Kuhn said.

Vincent Gard, a senior in mechanical engineering from Casey, is one of the five students going to Clausthal.

Gard said this is exchange program will help his career.

"The exchange program is something future employers will look at and the program provides great job experience," Gard said.

The other students going to Clausthal are Shelby Fuller, a senior in mechanical engineering from Beardstown; Gregory Boardman, a senior in mechanical engineering from Carbondale; John Schmidt, a senior in civil engineering from Dongola; and Frank Breier, a senior in mechanical engineering.

Rest, diet, counseling useful in fight against depression

By Jean Cunningham
Student Health Center

To Your Health

Everyone has days when they would describe their mood as "depressed." Most of the time, though, this feeling doesn't last long. Something pleasant or entertaining distracts them, or they wake up the next day feeling better.

These brief shifts in mood aren't really what mental health professionals refer to as depression. How would someone know if he or she had "real" depression?

The answer depends on the length of time the person feels depressed and the severity of symptoms they experience.

It is also important to consider whether there is an identifiable reason for feeling depressed; is someone grieving a loss, deep sadness and a persistent low mood are expected.

Otherwise, a consistently depressed mood for a period of two weeks in the absence of a loss or reason is the first thing to look for.

Other symptoms that commonly accompany a deep depression include a loss of interest or pleasure in activities that were formerly pleasurable; significant weight gain or loss without dieting; sleeping too much or not being able to sleep; feeling worthless or feeling excessively guilty; having trouble thinking, concentrating, or making decisions; and recurrent thoughts of death or suicide.

If several of these symptoms persist nearly every day for a period of two weeks or more, professional help is indicated.

Exercise can make a person feel better, and a regular program of exercise can help prevent future episodes of depression.

A health/diet and allowing enough time for rest is also important; few people feel at their best psychologically if their physical condition is poor.

Two agencies on campus, the Student Health Programs Counseling Center (453-5371) in Woody Hall and the Clinical Center (453-2361) in the Wham Building, provide counseling services to students free of charge. If a referral to a physician for antidepressant medication is needed, counselors at either agency can arrange this.

the current amount up to a 75-percent maximum benefit, Jackson said.

Using a small-scale example, Jackson said if an employee was eligible to receive $1,800, the bill would increase that amount by $180. If an employee was already eligible for a 74-percent benefit, this legislation could only raise the amount 1 percent.

Jackson said the 30 comes from a decrease in the required service credit for university employees.

"Under law currently (an employee) who retires at under age 60 or less than 35 years (service) has their annuity reduced," he said. "The bill reduces it to 30 years."

Larry Johnson, human resource officer from the SIUC personnel office, said the bill would affect some University employees.

"We have quite a few employees that have 30 or 31 years — but not 35," he said.

Johnson said to collect the benefits, SIUC employees must make a one-time payment of 6 percent of their highest annual income, with 20 percent of the same amount contributed by the University.

Johnson said he believes: SIUC will support the bill.

The teacher's union does not oppose the bill but may hope for a better deal, Hawkins said. He said he feels the bill is the best deal possible.

If the bill is passed this fall, it could go into effect as soon as July 1, 1995, he said.

study groups), and you can have a good time," Rundblat said.

Rundblat, a graduate student from India, said she made many friends when she came to the United States by getting involved in student organizations and study groups on campus.

"I'm married to an American," she said. "You can't be much more successful (at making American friends) than that."

Diane Hodgson, an SIUC foreign student advisor, said international students may be reluctant to ask for help with things they do not understand or participate in class discussions, because many cultures discourage students from asking questions in class or speaking directly to their teachers.

Hodgson encouraged international students to meet their professors and ask questions.

'New Plays' bring life to stage

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

The issue of multi-culturalism comes to the stage when SIUC students and community members show-case their talents in an "Evening of New Plays."

"As Usual" and "A Divorce," two one-act plays; and "Color Blind," a full-length play, are written and produced entirely by students.

"Color Blind," written by Michael J. Licwinko and directed by Shannon Webber, is the story of an African-American actress struggling to succeed in the theater.

It will be performed in the lab theater at 8 p.m. Friday and 8, and 2 p.m. April 10.

Licwinko said he wrote the play to reflect interactions that typify America.

"In America, straights can't deal with gays... northerners with southerners," he said.

"I chose the black/white issue because I've experienced it in my own life."

Webber and Licwinko worked together to incorporate the rewrites, although sometimes actors were not pleased with changing what they have worked on.

"As Usual," written by Geryll Robinson and directed by Dan Michel, also is the story of a young African-American woman dealing with such issues as racism and homo-phobia.

Robinson, who also is an actress, said she wrote the play because of low-quality roles for African-American women.

Various issues of alienation make the play something all people can relate to, Michel said.

"Even within the each subculture prejudice exists," he said.

Robinson said it has been difficult watching her words come to life, but she is pleased with the result.

"A Divorce," written by William Kirksey and directed by Greg Gerhard, is the story of an Indian couple whose relationship is threatened by cultural traditions.

Only one student is in this play.

The rest are community members, who have brought many of their own props to help round out the set.

"As Usual" and "A Divorce" will be performed at 8 p.m. in the lab theater Thursday, Saturday and April 9.

Those who want to participate in plays this summer can audition for the playwrights workshop plays, and can even receive academic credit for participation.

The auditions for "A Leasing Woman," performed July 18 and 25, "Stages" and "Father Lawrence's Solution," both performed July 19 and 26, and "Splitting Heirs," performed July 20 and 27, will be at 4 p.m. April 8 and at 10 a.m. April 9 in the laboratory theater.

billion more than the originally proposed amount.

The Coalition on Smoking or Health, a Washington D.C.-based organization consisting of the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association and the American Heart Association, reported that different tax rates would produce different results.

If the tax were 75-cents a pack, there would be 3.7 million fewer smokers and 900,000 lives would be saved.

Raising the tax to $1 a pack would produce 4.5 million fewer smokers and 1.1 million lives would be saved.

Increasing the tax to $1.50 a pack would produce 6.2 million fewer smokers and save 1.5 million lives, while a $2 tax a pack would produce 7.6 million fewer smokers and save 1.9 million lives.

Of the records provided by the universities, there only was one homicide — a 1992 involuntary manslaughter of a newborn at Western Illinois University.

The majority of the crimes committed were burglary, larceny and thefts among state universities. University of Illinois had the highest, with 494 thefts in 1991 and 598 in 1992.

"Crimes that students are vulnerable to are theft crimes because of the predictability of the times they are out of their rooms, especially over breaks or weekends," Garofalo said.

Jordan said the extra time created by students on leave enable police officers to change their focus.

Michael Haywood, director of undergraduate recruitment for the College of Business and Administration, said SIUC has a very safe atmosphere.

to help eliminate the segregation of many white universities by changing administrative policies.

Kim Anderson, assistant coordinator of the SIUC Black Affairs Council, said it is not unfair to exclude black colleges from the court's desegregation policy because blacks always are bombarded with white culture.

"Historically, black colleges should be exempt from the laws of desegregation because black universities were established as a means for providing education for African Americans at a time when white universities were exclusive."

Jason Bradford, a junior in radio and television, said he agrees that racism's continuing theme as a reason for the growth and existence of historically black colleges.

If African-American needs are not being met at white universities, it is only fair to try to meet those needs no matter what racial group you belong to, Bradford said.

"If you're not being served at a restaurant you would leave that restaurant and go where you can be served how you want to be served," Bradford said. "The day and time for us to ask someone else to satisfy our needs is over. We must stand up and create for ourselves."

Musicians find harmony outside class

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

SIUC faculty members Jeanine Wagner and Margaret Simmons are in sync with one another.

After 15 years of singing and playing together, they have achieved a harmony that seems to go beyond music.

Both faculty members, in the School of Music, will perform at 8 p.m. tonight at Shryock Auditorium, with the concert benefiting Mu Phi Epsilon, an international music fraternity.

Wagner, a soprano, said she was destined for a career in music because she is from a large, musical family.

She has been singing ever since. She won the 12th Mu Phi Epsilon International Competition, and has toured the nation, with her concerts benefiting the fraternity's philanthropies.

But Wagner does not sing simply to win awards but enjoys performing through what she calls an entirely different way of communicating.

"A dancer uses movement, a poet uses words," she said.

"In music, if you try to do it for any reason other than to communicate something it will not be successful."

Simmons began playing the piano when she was four and eventually received her undergraduate degree in piano.

The concert is free, but donations will be accepted at the door.

Dawgs blow eight-run lead, lose 16-11

Home win streak ends at 5 to Illini

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

Tuesday's Saluki baseball game with the University of Illinois was exactly what interstate rivalries are all about.

The contest took over three hours to complete and the two teams combined for 29 hits and 27 runs. But as the sun began to set and the dust finally settled at SIUC's Abe Martin Field, the Fighting Illini emerged with a 16-13 victory over the Salukis.

The loss brought the Dawgs home winning streak of five games to a close and dropped SIUC to 11-9 overall.

SIUC jumped all over the Illini in the bottom of the first inning, scoring six runs. The inning highlight was when Dan Esplin rocketed a three-run homer over the scoreboard in deep right center field.

The Illini came tomahawking back in the top of the second, though, with three runs off Saluki starter Mike Blang to cut the lead in half, 6-3.

And then SIUC delivered what appeared to be the knock-out blow in the bottom of the fourth when it scored an additional five runs to go up 11-3.

Saluki head coach Sam Riggelman said an eight run lead is usually enough for a team to cling to.

"When you find yourself ahead 11 to three you certainly hope your pitching is going to be able to hold and your defense will do a good job," he said. "The combination of those two things is what got us beat today."

Chris Sauritch, Saluki third baseman, contests a close play at third with Illini third baseman Brian Schullian in the seventh inning. Illinois trailed 11-6 going into the inning, but scored six runs to move ahead of the Dawgs 12-11. The Illini went on to win the game at Abe Martin Field 16-11. The loss put the Salukis at 11-9 on the season.

Salukis extend winning streak against Aces to 18

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The SIUC softball team extended its winning streak to 18 straight over Evansville by knocking off the Purple Aces twice yesterday.

The Salukis received some fine pitching performances and swung some hot bats in shutting down

Evansville 6-1 and 9-1.

SIUC head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said she was looking for consistency from the team and they came through offensively.

"By the second game we were hitting the ball hard and getting some hard hits," Brechtelsbauer said. "I'm hoping this kind of offensive output will put us back on track."

Brechtelsbauer said the Salukis also received two nice pitching performances from Tania Meier and Jamie Schutteck.

In the first game, Meier held the Purple Aces to a run on five hits. She struck out five in going the distance to lift her record to 4-3.

The top of the lineup did most of the damage for the Salukis as the number two through five hitters combined for nine hits, four runs and three rbi's. Christine Knotts went 3-3 with two rbi's to pace the Salukis while Jenny Klotz, Becky Lis, Mandy Miller, and Laurie Wilson all had two hits apiece.

The Salukis blew away the Purple Aces in game two.

Pitcher Jamie Schutteck moved her record to 5-2 on the season. She held Evansville to an unearned run on three hits.

Klotz and Knotts were once again unstoppable at the plate. Klotz had two basehits and drove in

Season's tough breaks cause team to regroup

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

Things have not been going well for the SIUC men's tennis team.

First, they went 1-4 over spring break.

Second, No. 3 Altat Merchant, off to a 13-2 start, is awaiting word from a specialist on possible nerve damage to his arm which will probably cause him to miss action for two weeks or longer.

Third, their match against Memphis State on Sunday was canceled keeping the squad out of action for nearly two weeks.

The Dawgs will look to put all of this behind them tonight when they head to Champaign, Ill., to face the University of Illinois.

SIUC head coach Jeremy Rowan said the loss of Merchant is going to be difficult but they have to move on.

Matt McManaway, who is yet to see action this season, will be thrust into the No. 6 spot for the Dawgs. Rowan will move No. 4 Juan Garcia, No. 5 Bojan Vuckovic and No. 6 Kei Kamesawa up a notch.

Vuckovic, who has compiled a 12-3 record on the season, is struggling with a back injury but Rowan said he still will play.

Besides working around injuries, Rowan said the team needs to get better play out of their doubles teams.

"We've got some work to do in doubles play," he said. "We need to get the fundamentals sunk in by conference play."

The Dawgs will look for a good effort against the Fighting Illini who are 6-6 on the season. Rowan said the Illini are pretty solid and are going to be tough to beat.

The Dawgs hit the court tonight at 6:30.

Cowboy head coach resigns

Back of challenge, personality conflicts cited for career move

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

It was like a gunfight in the old west. There were two grisly, stubborn old cowboys squaring off at high noon, with each man knowing there was no longer enough room in the town for both of them.

After two weeks of much publicized feuding, Dallas Cowboys head coach Jimmy Johnson ended the verbal standoff with his boss, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, by announcing his resignation as coach of pro football's most successful franchise.

The showdown began a few weeks ago with Johnson saying he would need some new challenges in the near future, implying that he might not be with the Cowboys much longer.

Jones answered by firmly stating that Johnson was under contract for another five years and would be doing no coaching of any other teams until the contract had expired.

The showdown boiled over last week. Jones threatened to fire

Johnson several times during a night of drinking. Johnson and Jones met Monday to no avail, but were able to come to a decision yesterday.

Johnson, in an upbeat news conference, said he is leaving due to a lack of focus and noted that he and Jones had personalities which caused them to clash. Johnson also said he had to leave in fairness to his players because it would not be fair to give them less than 100 percent concentration.

Jones released Johnson from the last five years of his conference and granted him a monetary award he called "A big thank you." Jones gave high praise to Johnson as the man mostly responsible for the team's turnaround from 1-15 in 1989 to two consecutive Super Bowl rings.

It looks like strange events for a team which just finished celebrating another world championship, but a quick glance at Johnson's past shows he is not prone to staying put and winning.

Johnson spent exactly five years at Oklahoma State building them into a national power, then jumped to the University of Miami for five years and collected a national championship for the Hurricanes.

How long did his stint with the Dallas Cowboys last?

Five years.

It is obvious that Johnson was not joking when he said he needs new challenges.

Johnson said he will not coach anywhere this fall, but will look at possibilities in the near future.

Jones would not comment on who is being looked at as the successor to Johnson, but rumors have Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer and Notre Dame legend Lou Holtz as possible early candidates.

Player reaction on the Cowboys has been somewhat quiet besides the grumbling of stars Emmitt Smith and Troy Aikman. Smith said he may think twice about returning to Dallas if Johnson did not, while Aikman said Johnson was a big part of the reason he signed on with the Cowboys.
